

Frank Curzio's FRANKLY SPEAKING

Announcer: Wall Street Unplugged looks beyond the regular headlines heard on mainstream financial media to bring you unscripted interviews and breaking commentary direct from Wall Street right to you on Main Street.

Frank Curzio: What's going on here? It's Friday, August 31st, and I'm Frank Curzio host of the Frankly Speaking podcast where I answer all of your questions. [inaudible 00:00:23], comedy, sports, and anything else you want to throw at me. I created this podcast to answer more of your questions that you've sent me to my Wall Street Unplugged podcast which I host every single Wednesday. If you want your questions answered, just send me an email at Frank@CurzioResearch.com, that's Frank@CurzioResearch.com. Be sure to put Frankly Speaking in the headline and you never know, your question might be the one I read on this podcast.

Let's start out with a question from Marcus. He's a good friend of mine that works at Merrill Lynch, listens to my podcast all the time. I just saw him this week and he asked me, "Frank, what's the difference between a stock and a bond?" Man, those Merrill Lynch guys, they don't know too much over there, huh? I'm just kidding. Marcus is actually a brilliant guy. Saw him last week because he runs a fantasy football draft that I have been in for the past three years, which I won twice, very good partner. I came in second last year and the whole league is filled with Merrill guys so I got to bust their chops a little bit, all really cool guys in this league and Marcus really is an awesome guy listening to the podcast. But he asked me a question and I'll answer in the podcast for you and his question, his real question was, because he knows the difference between a stock and a bond is ... We're just busting his chops ... He asked me what stock do I like as a trade maybe over the next six months.

The stock I'd like as a trade over the next six months is Intel. I know it's a large cap, you're like, ah, Intel ... you got a nice small cap name, you travel a lot, I have all these contacts ... He wants these small cap, massive 300% returns in six months, everyone should be a millionaire tomorrow ... I get it but sorry I can't give everything away for free and my paid subscribers [inaudible 00:02:13] know what names I love when it comes to small caps but as for a large cap name that I talked about before, and again, I don't want to give away ... I can't give everything away for free, right guys? But Intel, and don't sleep on Intel, I mean I bought Amazon last year and recommended it in my newsletter at nine and change and it's a double in eight months. Don't buy Intel thinking, wow, it's a safe company, I want something more exciting and things like that. At this level where it's come down, I think it's a steal here. Estimates have come down a ton, when I saw estimates I mean analyst's estimates.

There's a lot of analysts that cover the stocks to the point where 2019 earnings are only expected to grow around one, one and a half percent year over year, which means from 2018 in a market where the average company, SP500, is expected to grow earnings well into the double digits. So, I like to track this stuff. It was almost like buying Tesla going into last quarter where you had Elon Musk knowing every single risk that everyone on Twitter was destroying him about going in. Intel, right now, knows every risk, they know everything that people are concerned about and it's on the table for them. So it should be pretty easy for them to address those issues, which I'll go over in a second, in order to beat earnings expectations.

Remember, just like Tesla, Tesla came down to the 300 levels, 360, 370 and they reported and the stock when a lot higher, we all know what happened, I think. Listen, I think Tesla's going to go much lower from here, I don't think you can beat those again. I won't look at Tesla, you can read a million things about Tesla, I'm just saying as a trade, it made sense going into the quarter because expectations were so low, everybody was beating the crap out of it. But Elon Musk knew these risks going in and he even knew that he should apologize to the analysts. Which is very, very smart, turn that call and the stock went a lot higher as a trade.

So Intel, same thing. Even if the stock is down sharply and the analysts says 41, sell side analysts, which is the J.P. Morgans, Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley, those are sell side analysts, so 41 of them, those are the guys that provide models and things that have target prices ... 41 covering the stock, only 55% of those analysts rate the stock a buy. That's very, very low. Very low. Not just for technology, for an overall stock. I would say the average is probably like 65, 70%, easy that most sell side analysts, on average, it's 70% of them will rate the stock a buy. Again, it's about getting into investment banking business and things like that, you know.

The more incentivized to have buys on stocks but they do, by law, have to have sells ... It's amazing, you have to have a certain ... You look at Goldman Sachs, when they remove something from their conviction buy list, even if they believe nothing else should be in that conviction buy list, they put a stock in there because you need ... What is it like 25 in there? You have to have a certain percentage of sales, think about that. You could think every stock on the planet's a buy right now but because of your ... whatever it is ... I don't know if it's SEC, I don't know if it's their own personal guidelines, whatever, compliance but they have to have a certain percentage of stocks with a sell rating even if they don't believe those are sell [inaudible 00:05:19]. Isn't that kind of crazy? Anyway, we won't go there.

But 55% and I put that in perspective, if we look at companies like Amazon, 92% of the analysts think it's a buy and all these companies I'm going to mention right now, which are three of them, they all have about 35 to 45 analysts covering them. Amazon, 92% of the analysts covering Amazon think it's a buy. Google, 93% of the analysts covering Google believe it's a buy. Facebook, 90%, in this last quarter, pretty bad, 90% of the analysts that cover that stock for Facebook, 90% of them believe it's going higher and they have a buy rating on it. And only 55% for Intel. Expectations are low, that's what you love to see because if you're looking going into next quarter and Amazon or Google just meets earnings estimates, the stock's probably going to fall 5 to 7%. They'd have to report blockbuster results because expectations are high.

Intel, if they meet estimates, and report [inaudible 00:06:18], that stock's probably going to go up 5 to 7%, that's going to be considered good. That's the difference between expectations going into the quarter. Not only do you want to look at the analysts estimates but you want to look at what the stock is doing. Stocks run up 100% into the quarter, every analyst has these buy ratings going crazy, raising their estimates, going out into the quarter, that company better blow out the numbers because even if they're in line or they report in line guidance for next quarter for the rest of the year, that stock's going to come down a lot. Expectations and sentiment are a big thing. Intel, right now, very, very low, I think you get the point.

The average target price for Intel is about 10% higher than the current price, only 10%. That's remarkable considering it was just trading at that price not long ago, about 55, 56. The stocks down 20% since ... What did I say? Over the past three months and pull back? And what do analysts worry about? They worry about margin compression, tougher comps, which means they're comps going to next year ... just comparisons that means, it's not going to be easy, especially when you see ... when you have tougher comps when it comes to restaurants or same store sales or retailers where you always want to see same store sales positive and if they're positive, depending on how positive or what the estimates are ... but when you're positive and you're going 10%, 10%, 10% it gets harder to grow at that rate as you get bigger just like every company.

Percentage-wise it's very hard to grow a business that ... it's easy to grow a business by 100% that has five million, you go to 10 million revenues next year, 20 million, when you get up to 100 million in revenues it's hard to go to 200 million. So that percentage is going to come down so they're going to have tougher comps going forward, year over year. They're saying worry about more delays for the [inaudible 00:08:07] leadership which they've been delaying for what, three years now, which a lot of people just got fed up and said, "Okay, you're supposed to have an edge there, you're supposed to be huge and now you're bringing in more competition to the stock". AMD, Nvidia maybe, you know. That's what they're worried about so all these risks are on the table, there's no surprises. And Intel knows these risks and with expectations low, I wouldn't be surprised if the company blows past expectations the next couple of quarters and shoots a lot, lot higher.

And if I'm wrong, which I'm never wrong, but if I happen to be wrong, obviously you know I'm kidding ... I don't see a lot of risk from this price because it's already down 20% from its May highs. Again, expectations are super low. So I like Intel as a trade over the six months. If you want the small cap trades and things like that, we have newsletters for that where people pay. Can we give this away for free, it comes to you weekly where we highlight all the stories and things like that for free. I mean we're doing educational videos, Facebook things, we have great platforms for free that you can look at including two podcasts but we can't give everything away for free because in the end I have to feed my kids.

Next question, and by the way, Marcus, this one's for you. You have no shot at beating me this year in fantasy because my draft is actually great. Probably the best draft I had thus far in that league which I'm very excited about, on paper at least. So I'm really excited.

All right, next question. And speaking of fantasy, Ari asks, "Frank, every year you give us in depth preview of fantasy football. I didn't hear you mention anything about football yet which is surprising with the season starting next week.

So who is some of your fantasy sleepers and will the Eagles repeat?” Love sports questions. I don’t get any sports questions anymore. It’s pretty cool, a lot of sports fanatics out there. As you guys know I’m a huge Eagles fan. I went to the Super Bowl. One of the best experiences of my life outside of my kids being born, of course, but it really was incredible.

I can tell you sleepers first, there are a lot of sleepers, Alex Collins of Baltimore, really good running back. He’s starting which is surprising because he’s going like ... What is he 17th, 18th rate of running back right now in fantasy? I like Corey Clement. And again, these are sleepers, guys. That’s an Eagles running back and a point per reception league. You guys that are fantasy guys know what that means. Running backs cover the back field, they catch, that’s a point. Sometimes leagues have points for every reception, sometimes they don’t, but he’s going 140th, averaging league, remember Clement was one of the guys I highlighted before going to the Super Bowl, I said, “That’s my sleeper pick, that’s a difference maker.” He could be a game changer and he was. I mean, he was incredible that game. He’s got to get the ball a lot coming out of the back field and I think he’s a sleeper. You get him really in the late rounds. Wide receivers, I like Sterling Shepherd from the Giants. Hey look I’m not a ... If Eli can’t ... If Eli ...

Frank Curzio:

If Eli does not have great statistics this year, I mean, he’s been one of the worst rated quarterbacks of the last three years. In New York, if you sit him as a coach they throw the coach out. Basically, fire the coach, which is kind of amazing. That’s why the Giants and most New York teams suck. It’s more about the media. What the media wants, not what’s good, right? If it was for good ... If Belichick was there he would have got fired from the Giants 10 years ago for having one losing season in a row. That’s the way New York is, and that’s fine. I come from New York, so I can say that, but it is frustrating.

Sterling Shepard, I mean they have a great offensive line. They have Saquon Barkley, Odell Beckham. I think it’s going to open up a lot of room for them to put up great, great stats, and he’s going really low right now. I mean, no one's even really paying attention to him. Plus, the Giants have a horrible defense, so they're going to be playing from behind a lot, so I think it's a really good pick.

For quarterbacks, I'm going to tell you about my sleepers, and you're not going to believe it, but Matt Ryan is my sleeper. You say, "Matt Ryan, how could it be Matt Ryan?" It may not be a sleeper to some, because last year he was the second rated quarterback, I think, behind Aaron Rodgers, and even before Tom Brady. That was last year. Last year he had a terrible, horrible season with the biggest busts, but right now you could pick up Ryan like the eighth, ninth round in drafts.

He's ranked as the eleventh ... 111, right? So, as the 111th best player in the draft. It's crazy, and his offense is going to be great this year. It's the second year under his new offensive coordinator, and the numbers that this guy puts up are amazing. His second year in going forward [inaudible 00:12:39] with his offensive coordinators. You have that offense in place, it's a guy you can pick up really, really late, and I think it's a fantastic backup that's going to give you a good opportunity to switch a quarterback, because he's going to have a lot of good match-ups.

I bet you he's ranked in the top six or seven ... Maybe about sixth quarterback. I think you might see five that are better than him this year, in terms of stats. Got his whole team back, good offensive line. I think they're going to go nuts this year Atlanta, and I think the sky's the limit for them. Matt Ryan is my sleeper for quarterback. I know it sounds crazy, but no one's really picking him as a starter. I think he's [inaudible 00:13:14] down. 10th or 11th maybe in quarterbacks that are being chosen before him, which is kind of insane for me.

Love those questions. Getting to the last part of that already, about the Eagles. I don't think there's been an NFC team that's ever ... Have they repeated in the Super bowl? I don't know. I know it's not NFC East team, I don't think. Maybe, but it's very, very difficult. Very difficult to repeat. If you look so far, they look horrible. They haven't won a game in preseason, the Eagles, and Foles has looked like he forgot ... He looked like ... You know, the last couple games of the season last year, before he started figuring things out.

Granted, their best wide receivers aren't on the field, the top running back aren't really on the field. They're going to have their full team, but they look kind of rusty, and they may be coming down ... I wouldn't be surprised, Thursday they're opening up the season next week. I wouldn't be surprised if they come out really, really flat that game, because the emotions going to be flying high. It's a game that I really want to go to, but I just can't travel. I'm just too busy. Everyone says that.

A lot of my Patriot fans who have been really, really cool and everything, and great guys. I guess you're great when you win the Super bowl every single year, and you make the players. They got Tom Brady, who's the greatest man, male on Earth. But, besides that ... They all told me that, "You need to go to this game." That first game from winning the Super bowl, and the banners coming down, hanging the banner ... The Super bowl banner's incredible, but it's going to be [electrifying 00:14:40]. I wouldn't be surprised if they do fall flat in that first game. Let's see if Wentz comes back, which we don't know yet. Wentz is supposed to come back, maybe first. It doesn't look like it or they would announce it, but maybe, probably second or third game we'll see.

Hopefully, Foles can pick up the slack, but they have all the tools. The defense is very, very good this year, their offensive line is much better. They got everybody back. Jason Peters. It's just a matter of them executing right now, and they're kind of flat. I know it's preseason, and I always discount preseason, but they really, really look back right now. Foles couldn't even complete passes to wide open in the first couple games, so I am definitely a little nervous. It will be very, very difficult for them to repeat, but I'm hoping that they will.

If they do, I don't know if I'm going to pay the money to go to Super bowl this year. Definitely worth it for first time, but I could see why 75% of the people in Minnesota at the Super bowl were Eagle fans, because the Patriot fans, you go broke after your team makes the Super bowl every single year. That's it for sports. Let's get to a question, stock related, from Joel.

Says, "Hey, Frank. What do you think of marijuana stocks here? Should we be buying right now, even though they've had a huge run-up? Thanks for all you do." Joel, on May 18th, someone asked me about marijuana stocks, and I gave them a few recommendations. This is an industry I covered, I want to say, almost longer than 95% of the analysts out there. I recommended several marijuana stocks in 2014. We did a big promotion around it, and it did horrible, because nobody was interested in it.

People are only interested in things when they're at the top, and that's why you're asking me this question right now. You're seeing marijuana stocks being mentioned on CNBC right now, because they're going crazy, which is the trap I'm trying to prevent you from walking right into. You're supposed to be buying these, like, on May 18th. What I said, my favorite stock is Canopy Growth, CGC. 3.7 million square feet of land, growing marijuana through certain facilities. Constellation Brands had a billion dollar investment with them, and they just made another one recently, which sent the stocks soaring higher.

May 18th stock was 28, now it's 45. 60% gain in three months. That's pretty cool. If you're buying it now, ah, man, I don't know. We all know that legalization in Canada, the US, the states starting to approve recreationally. We all know that. All the statistics, and all the voting and stuff like that in 2014-15. I was just too early to it, because nobody wants ...

Like, Uranium right now. Uranium is definitely going to go higher. If you have a three year outlook, you're going to make a fortune in it. Three years from now, when Uranium is probably at $50 a pound, which is it's at $27, $26 these days, and the stocks are up over 400%. Everyone's going to say, "Frank, should I buy Uranium?" That's what happens.

That's the way we're programmed, to buy during the excitement, during the highs, and sell when they're low, because we're like, "Oh no, we got to get out of this." That's something that I'm trying to help you out with, which you don't do. Getting questions like this, it's a good question. You shouldn't be asking me that, you should be taking profits on these now.

May 18th was a good time to buy them, but now ... Really, the last two, three weeks there's even a couple stocks that are up 100%. They're starting to come down. You see the [inaudible 00:18:05] short seller is starting to short these stocks. Of course, they're going to say, "They're fraudulent," and they have these massive short positions first. They come on, "It's fraudulent." They're not going to tell you that it's over-valued, it should go down 15% now.

Short sales go on TV, they take these massive positions. It's amazing. Security law ... If you're a longer stock, you're a hedge fund now, you take a massive position, you can't go on TV, three o'clock in the afternoon and say, "This thing is going to go up 700%. It's going to go up 700% next month." As you're saying that, you're telling your traders, your traders are selling it as the stock's going up, because you mentioned it on CNBC to millions of people. You get arrested for that.

Short sellers, no. You're allowed to do that when you're a short seller. You could say, everything I'm sending you is totally unreliable. It may not be factually correct or anything, but based on what I'm reading, this stock is fraudulent, and they took a massive short position. They sent their research to all the little blogs, and little posts and stuff. Then, he goes on CNBC and it was great, because when somebody actually asked him a question ...

He's left Citron Research, and he is a really good short seller, by the way. He's a good one, but she actually asked him a question, and said, "Hey," and he tried to avoid it, and she came back and I loved it. She said, "No, what our audience cares about is, did you reduce your position now? Since you had your position yesterday, and you came on TV ..." I forgot the name of the stocks getting crushed. He said, "Yeah, I reduced it a little bit." Kind of amazing, but at least he admitted it.

He goes on TV, tells everyone it's short. Everyone starts short, the stock's already down 25% from you sending it out to blogs, sending out everywhere, saying that this is fraud. It's probably not fraudulent, it's probably just over-valued. You highlight a couple things that are on the fence, that are questionable, and that's the way short sales work, and that's perfectly legal, I guess, by the FCC.

They don't mind when you do that. Even though you destroy companies, you destroy their credibility, and they could be all lies, which is okay, because they put it in their disclaimer. Pretty easy. Teaching you a little bit about law there, and securities law. Anyway, getting back to the question about marijuana stocks ...

I also recommended a company I still like that's up about, I'd say, 3%, 5%, 7% or whatever. It's GW Pharmaceuticals, biotech company, incredible applications, just got FDA approval for one of their drugs for kids, Dravet Syndrome and things like that. That's one of the ones I like long term. I've liked it for a while. That was one of my original recommendations, and a lot lower. I think it's up over a hundred percent since we first recommended it in 2014.

Getting back to my point here is, buying marijuana stocks today, after the fact, and the reason why so many people are interested in it ... What you see is because they're up so much, and you get excited, and you don't want to be left out. It's kind of like crypto. I mean, how many people bought in January and February who are now destroyed? Even in the past three months. We know we have a crypto product that most tokens, most of these crypto currencies are down 40%, 50%, 60% in three months. They're down 80%, 90% since January, February. They've gotten crushed.

When was the biggest part of the market, and when did the most people get in? January, because that's the most excitement. That's what happens, every sector, every stock. Instead of looking at marijuana stocks and saying, "Wow, should I get into marijuana," I got a better sector for you. A much better sector. That's biotech. If you're subscribed to my Curzio Venture Newsletter, you know what I'm talking about.

We just recommended two small biotech stocks back to back. One of them we're up pretty good on, the other one is even, maybe up a little bit. We just recommended it a couple weeks ago, two weeks ago. Another biotech stock in our portfolio, it's up a hundred percent in less than two months. It's a stock we're up 40% on, then it fell, like most biotechs over the past few months, a crush, and we're down about 25%, 30% on it at one time. In biotechs you got to be able to weather that storm. We do have stops on our-

Frank Curzio: Again, biotech, you've gotta be able to weather that storm. We do have stops on our positions, didn't hit our stop ... and it really started taking off and it went higher, higher, higher. It's in a remarkable uptrend right now, and it's another 100% winner. I want to say it's four or five since we started the newsletter less than two years ago and not included buyouts and things like that and all the other positions.

So, CVO has been worth it, the subscription price times whatever. If you subscribed at least over the last year, even over the last two years where our first position out of the gate was really but it was a junior mining stock we didn't do well on, but now we've done well on a lot, lot of stocks, and that portfolio. Listen, this isn't me patting me on my back. You guys pay a lot of money for that service. I'm just doing my job. That's my job to find you these really good ideas, ideas you're not going to see any place else and stuff like that.

But biotech I'm seeing tremendous value in, guys, and it's not easy to spot value because stops are at all-time highs, pretty close ... but biotech I'm just seeing so many good buys. Things that just stocks that have been sold off to levels they shouldn't be trading at where the risk is so limited and the upside could be so much. We're not even talking about over a long period of time, six to nine months, but that's the way I want you to think, Joel. Instead of thinking of marijuana stocks because I mentioned like crazy right now. Well, gaming stocks that were mentioned crazy, what, month or two months ago, right, Supreme Court ruling where states can legalize gaming themselves.

Start thinking about the things that are out of favor, that are not so exciting because the best thing in the world, I'm telling you, it is the greatest thing in the world when I can recommend a company I can give this one away because we're up over 100% on, which is VNOM, Viper Energy. Good friend of mine gave me that pick, a pick I've never heard of. He showed me the research. It was one of the most remarkable companies just from its structure since it was a MLP and a royalty company together, which I thought was remarkable. It was great timing because I was bullish on oil. It was one of the best plays that I knew last year and we're up 125%, and to see analyst and newsletter writers recommend it over the past three weeks is the greatest feeling in the world. Because they're recommending it, you know what, we're taking half off the table because we were early to the party.

That's my job to find these things early before they go on TV, before you're emailing me about marijuana stocks. I want to get you in like May 18th with Canopy. This where you're up 60% and people are saying, "Oh, should I buy it here?" You're like, "Yeah, sure, you should buy it. Here, I'll sell it to you. Thank you. I'll take the 6% gain." That's how you play the markets. That's how you make money.

Anyway ... I wanted to bring something up to you guys. It's very important and it has to do with the previous question, [inaudible 00:24:47] marijuana stocks because I did mention something on May 18th and maybe you didn't hear about it and now you're asking about marijuana stocks. But when it comes to stocks mentioned on my podcast, especially Wall Street Unplugged, which I host every Wednesday, without keeping track positions mentioned by all amazing guests I interview every single week. Those guests include billionaires, newsletter writers, hedge fund managers, mutual fund managers, expert stock analysts, columnists, you name it.

Doing this for over 10 years and I've been fortunate and humble to have a really amazing network, which allows me to get to so many ideas and see [inaudible 00:25:19]. Just like they ask me ideas, I ask them for ideas, and it's a big network that my subscribers and paid subscribers' a part of, and even you're part of ... by having these guys on my podcast you get to listen to them. But what I realize is a lot of people are not taking advantage of some of the stocks that are being mentioned. Chris MacIntosh came in and recommend Bitcoin at ... what is it, 400? I didn't buy it either. Don't feel bad, but even now it's 7,000, which down from 19,000, it's still a pretty nice gain. I recommended it a few years later.

But there's just so many stock picks that get lost, so we decided to create a brand new product called All Star Portfolio that tracks these picks. We have buy-up-to prices, stop losses. We highlight the analyst, his background, detailed analysis on the stocks, and it's a fantastic, really awesome product that we're getting unbelievable feedback on, and not just because it's original since you're getting a brand new pick from a pro whom I interview almost every single week ... also with a pretty cool writeup and analysis, but it's getting good feedback because of the price.

We're charging a huge $1 for this product. Seriously, $1, which means if everyone listens to this podcast subscribes to it, it's going to mean nothing to me. It's all like ... with all the expenses we have as a business. You say, "Why are you doing it for $1?" Well, it's a $1 for the first two weeks, and after that it's only $9.95 a month after, which is pretty cool because you're going to get picks after picks after picks after picks almost every single week. Sometimes I'll have a CEO that I'll interview and, yeah, we're not going to use his stock and things like that. But when we have analysts on, which is probably three out of four weeks, get brand new picks, constant analysis, buy-up-to prices, trader portfolio, stop losses, and things like that.

You say, "Well, Frank, why are you charging $1 for it?" Because we don't have to charge and hype up a product for $99 or $69 and get you in the door for something like, where those promises are not going to be fulfilled that were made in the promotion you subscribed to. With us, it's like, here, you want it? like Dollar Shave Club, you want it for a dollar, here it is. If you like it, $9.95 a month. If not, it's fine because we know based on looking at statistics, but we kind of guessed it that once you see this product, you're going to want to have it and you're going to stay it in long term, and you should because we're going to raise the price of this.

We created a special website, it's called www.allstarportfolio.com. It's www.allstarportfolio.com, and you'll see it and on the top it says, "Just for podcast listeners only." So this price is only available to you guys right now. We're going to really start marketing to the masses, but it's a way for you to track these ... it just makes sense. Am I selling this? Yes, I'm trying to sell it because I want to make you money. A lot of the guys that have on my podcast I vet. I don't have guys on there that are just going to shout out, "The market's going to do down 900%," or "It's going to go up," and they just have a terrible track record. I'm not going to put those people in front of you, but I just feel like some of their advice is getting lost because I'm interviewing a guy every week.

I know that you guys probably don't listen to the podcast all the time. You have your own jobs and thing. Maybe you listen to it a week later or a month later. You're going on vacation and stuff like that, but here's a portfolio that tracks their picks and holds them accountable, right, which nobody's held accountable in the newsletter industry anymore. So, let's bring a little honesty to the business. Let's see how these guys really do, which I know they do great because I already vetted them, and they're [inaudible 00:28:45] contacts of mine and in my network, but now you get their picks for a very, very cheap price because thousands and thousands and thousands of dollars for so many newsletters out there.

This is something that's available to anyone by just going to allstarportfolio.com. If you're interested, fine. Again, it's $1 to try it out. If not, don't worry about it, and believe the $1 is not going to make me rich. I promise you. But I want to do is really just put a great product in front of you because I think this is really going to be beneficial to you. Right now, a lot of our picks are really starting to take off of that newsletter. These guys have been doing very great lately.

At the beginning, it was a little rusty because we started February/March. March wasn't too great, but over the past two, two-and-a-half months with the picks going in there, we've seen 50% gains, 20% a lot of gains in newsletter, just really great ideas, and guys, these ideas aren't just limited to your normal stock picks. It's large caps. It's small caps. It's crypto companies. It's income, all sectors, international countries ... everything, which is pretty cool. I mean even bonds, closed-end bonds. We had Van Simmons last week, just different thing with coins and things like that. So you're going to get so many really cool picks that you're not going to find any place else. Anyway, I've gone on long enough about it, but I did want to mention it since we got a question on marijuana stocks when we covered that a couple months ago, and I really want to see you guys make a lot of money and get ahead of these trends, not get behind them.

So I don't want you asking me about marijuana stocks right now or the gaming stocks after all the gaming laws changed, everything like that. We want to buy these things ahead. That's how I made my career. That's why there's a lot of people subscribed to my stuff. That's why I've been doing this for 25 years. You can't be in this position 25 years if you have bad stock picks or a bad track record. You just can't. There's a reason why I've been doing this all my life and that's why. Having great contacts, traveling, finding those ideas before anybody else, and this is a good way that you could track those ideas as well from some of the best analysts in the world through the All Star Portfolio.

Okay, guys, any question, comments, anything, feel free to email me at frankcurzio@curzio.com. That's frank@curzio.com, and that's it for me. Have an awesome weekend. I'll see you guys in seven days. Take care.

Announcer:

The information presented on Wall Street Unplugged is the opinion of its host and guests. You should not base your investment decisions solely on this broadcast. Remember, it's your money and your responsibility. Wall Street Unplugged produced by the Choose Yourself Podcast Network, the leader in podcasts, produced to help you choose yourself.

All content Copyright © 2018 Curzio Research. All Rights Reserved. · www.frankcurzio.com

All information provided on this newsletter pertaining to investing, stocks, securities must be understood as information provided and not investment advice. We advise all readers and subscribers to seek advice from a registered professional securities representative before deciding to purchase or trade in stocks or any securities presented in this newsletter. All information provided regarding the companies featured in this newsletter comes from the companies themselves, SEC filings, news releases, company web as well as other sources of publicly available information. The profiles of companies are not a solicitation or recommendation to buy, sell, or hold these or any other securities.

Investors should not rely solely on the information contained in this newsletter. Rather, investors should use the information contained in this newsletter as a starting point for doing additional independent research on the featured companies. The advertisements within this newsletter are not to be construed as offers to purchase securities in the companies which may be the subject of such advertisements pursuant to federal or state law or the laws of any foreign jurisdiction. The profiles on this website and the newsletter are believed to be reliable; however, Curzio Research disclaims any and all liability as to the completeness or accuracy of the information contained in any advertisement and for any omissions of material facts from such advertisement. Investing in micro-cap and growth securities is highly speculative and carries an extremely high degree of risk. It is possible that an investor's investment may be lost or impaired due to the speculative nature of the companies profiled. Information presented in this newsletter and supplied through the newsletter contain "forward looking statements" within the meaning of Section 27A of the Securities Act of 1933 and Section 21B of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Any statements that express or involve discussions with respect to predictions, expectations, beliefs, plans, projections, objectives, goals, assumptions or future events or performance are not statements of historical fact and may be "forward looking statements." Forward looking statements are based on expectations, estimates and projections at the time the statements are made that involve a number of risks and uncertainties which could cause actual results or events to differ materially from those presently anticipated. Forward looking statements in this action may be identified through the use of words such as "projects", "foresee", "expects", "will", "anticipates", "estimates", "believes", "understands" or that by statements indicating certain actions "may," "could," or "might" occur. There is no guarantee past performance will be indicative of future results. The accuracy or completeness of the information in this newsletter is only as reliable as the sources they were obtained from. Curzio Research, research team, affiliates, and/or families may at times may hold positions in securities mentioned herein, and may make purchases or sales in such securities featured within our newsletters. No compensation for efforts in research, presentation, and dissemination of information on companies featured within our newsletter has been paid to Curzio Research. Investments in private or public small cap companies are generally deemed to be highly speculative and to involve substantial risk, making it appropriate for readers to consult with professional investment advisors and to make independent investigations before acting on information published by Curzio Research and its staff must inform its subscribers that investment in small cap companies could prove to be high risk investments with the result of loss of part or total principal investment. Always remember that Curzio Research is not an analyst and we do not employ or contract any analysts. Investing in securities such as the ones mentioned herein are for high risk tolerant individuals only and not the general public. Whether you are an experienced investor or not you should always consult with a broker before purchasing or selling any securities that we profile in newsletters, mention in email updates etc, consult for or interview. In compliance with the Securities Act of 1933, Section 17(b), any and all compensation received from a company is publicly stated.